New Website Launched

New website offers updated Open Tech information to current and future customers.

Dewitt, NY (February 1, 2008) – In an in-house collaboration between Software Engineering and Business Development, Open Tech launched its new and improved website. The website design's improved navigation allows customers easier access to updated product information. The addition of a customer support page gives the ability to contact Open Tech more readily and retrieve important documentation. Customers can easily request an on-line web demonstration of any of our software products.

In addition, Resellers will have access to a restricted Reseller Only Area for detailed information on product literature, sample proposals, presentations, and marketing materials.

“Over the next twelve months, the Open Tech team will continue to add more informative content for our current and future customers,” says Tim Capra, Open Tech's Founder. “We want our customers to have access to the latest information about our products and services, and easily contact us for support and training.”
